Preface

Belgium

Historically, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg were known as the Low Countries, which used to cover a somewhat larger area than the current Benelux group of states. The region was called Belgica in Latin because of the Roman province Gallia Belgica which covered more or less the same area. From the end of the Middle Ages until the 17th century, it was a prosperous centre of commerce and culture. From the 16th century until the Belgian Revolution in 1830, when Belgium seceded from the Netherlands, many battles between European powers were fought in the area of Belgium, causing it to be dubbed the "cockfighting arena of Europe," a reputation strengthened by both World Wars.

Upon its independence, Belgium participated in the Industrial Revolution and, during the course of the 20th century, possessed a number of colonies in Africa. The second half of the 20th century was marked by the rise of contrasts between the Flemish (located primarily in the northern half of the country) and the Francophones (southern half) fueled by differences of language and the unequal economic development of Flanders and Wallonia. Aristide Adolphe Huybrecht was born to Adolf and Louise (Destombes) Huybrecht on September 14, 1868. He was eleven years old when his father died in 1879. Aristide and Clotilde Lievigne Buisine were married on August 31, 1895. After immigrating to Canada in 1897, they had several children who became the ancestors of the families contained within these pages. They appeared in the 1901 Canadian Census living in Sifton, Manitoba. The family lived, according to the records, with Aristide's younger brother Eugene who had come to Canada before them in 1890. The census records also show that Aristide could speak both French and English, as well as read and write, but that Clotilde could speak only French. It doesn't state that she could read or write. Around 1907 the family moved to the community of Wauchope, Saskatchewan which had been founded in 1901. They lived with the Quennelle family until their house could be built. It was in Wauhope where the rest of the Huybrecht children were born. Aristide was an influential man in the town, serving as mayor for many years. He also ran a farm implement store where he sold Massey, Harris and Cockshutt machinery. He also had fuel pumps for a while. The girls attended school at the nearby Saint Anne Convent. Aristide died in Wauchope, Saskatchewan on January 5, 1937. [6]

Clotilde Lievigne Buisine - wife of Aristide Huybrecht
Clotilde Lievigne Buisine was born on February 11, 1870 in France. She married Aristide Huybrecht on August 31, 1895 and had eleven children. Clotilde had a physical problem that caused most of her babies to be born prematurely. Of the eleven children
